

Leftist Web Site Endorses Romney in Michigan Primary

Contributed by Tom McGregor
Fri, Jan 11, 2008, 02:51 PM

The liberal Web site Daily Kos is encouraging Democrats in Michigan to cross over and vote for Mitt Romney in Michigan Tuesday primary. Apparently, the thinking of the liberals encouraging the crossover vote is that a Romney victory there will further muddle the Republican presidential picture and help the Democrats win the White House in November. Fox News reports that "it's a classic dirty trick, but perfectly legal. And while Machiavellian political ploys of this sort rarely work, the author's logic is thus: "A Romney victory in Michigan will keep him in the presidential race. And the more candidates slugging it out among the Republicans, the better for Democrats." In order for Romney to stay competitive, he needs to win in Michigan because John McCain is riding high after his stunning win in the New Hampshire's primary Tuesday, and Mike Huckabee's star is still shining bright following his Iowa victory. Romney is spending most of his time campaigning in Michigan and he has repeatedly said that he's going to win in this state.

To read the entire article from Fox News, link here:

Tmcgregordallas@yahoo.com