

Al Gore Demands 'Global Warming' TV Meteorologists

Contributed by Tom McGregor
Sun, Jan 29, 2012, 06:29 PM

Green guru, former US Vice President Al Gore, is funding environmental groups that are demanding all local TV weather forecasters broadcast 'climate change' updates to alert viewers on daily greenhouse emissions. Perhaps, warm fronts will soon be labeled as 'carbon footprints high pressure zones.'

The Houston Chronicle reports that, "the fight for hearts and minds when it comes to climate change has moved to a new battleground: your television set."

Al Gore activists have launched a campaign called, 'Forecast the Facts' to blow hot air at television meteorologists who are "deniers" of mainstream climate change science.

According to the Houston Chronicle, "led by several groups, including 350.org, the League of conservation Voters, and the Citizens Engagement Lab, the campaign was spurred by recent surveys finding that half or more of TV forecasters hold contrarian climate change views."

Daniel Souweine, director of the Forecast the Facts drive, said, "TV meteorologists have as much, if not more, opportunity to talk to the American public about climate change than anyone."

To read the entire article from the Houston Chronicle, link here:Mcgregor@chinadaily.com.cn