

Anaheim Rioters Sabotage Obama's Security

Contributed by Tom McGregor
Thu, Jul 26, 2012, 07:07 PM

President Barack Obama must contend with the anger of Anaheim rioters, who are bent on sabotaging police activities that include protecting the U.S. President during visits to California.

A group, describing itself as Anonymous, has pledged to seriously disrupt the communications' network of police departments in California.

According to its press release, the group delivered this message to cops that said, "we will attack and deface your web sites, raid your data, blow up your phone lines with black faxes, bomb your E-mail inboxes, dox your officers – and destroy anything else of yours on the internet, we can find."

As reported by the Houston Chronicle, "this city's year-old $18 million police radio system failed during President Barack Obama's visit to Oakland on Monday and during protests surrounding it."

Barry Donelan, president of Oakland Police Officers Association said that at one point cops couldn't reach dispatchers for approximately 30 minutes.

To read the entire article from the Houston Chronicle, link here:tmcgregordallas@yahoo.com