

'Anonymous' Declares War on French Socialists

Contributed by Tom McGregor
Wed, Aug 1, 2012, 07:10 PM

There's a famous saying, "the enemy of your enemy is my friend." Hence, the militant Left-Wing organization, calling itself "Anonymous," has already made some bitter enemies, including President Barack Obama and the French Socialist government.

Anonymous sparked such hatred from Obama that he deployed the US Army and Homeland Security to order riot gear equipment to prepare for an imminent battle against the group. Now, the French government has taken legal action against them as well.

An Anonymous press release reports that, "the Anonymous logo and slogan has been defiled and registered through the National Institute of Industrial Property (INPI) in France. An online t-shirt company called "Early Flicker" or "E-flicker" has registered the Anonymous slogan and logo passed it off as their own. Now under French law the company owns the rights to the Anonymous logo and slogan."

Anonymous pledges to retaliate against French Socialists "until the registration has been revoked and a public apology has been made." They insist on war, since their motto is "we do not forgive."Tmcgregordallas@yahoo.com