Perhaps it should come as no surprise that violence has spread at U.S. Consulates throughout the Middle East. President Barack Obama permitted Muslim militants to work as security guards at the high-security compounds. The Houston Chronicle reports that, "heavily armed militants used a protest of an anti-Islam film as a cover and may have had help from inside Libyan security in their deadly attack on the U.S. Consulate, a senior Libyan official said Thursday."

Libya had just announced its first four arrests, which indicate that protestors could infiltrate the consulate with the assistance of radical Islamic terrorists working as security guards in the compound. Violent protestors shouted code words, "God is great," to secure entry.

The jihad rampage killed the U.S. ambassador and three other Americans.

According to the Houston Chronicle, "Eastern Libya's deputy interior minister, Wannis el-Sharef, said a mob first stormed the consulate Tuesday night and then, hours later, raided a safe house in the compound just as U.S. and Libyan security arrived to evacuate the staff. That suggested, el-sharef said, that infiltrators, within security forces may have tipped off the militants to the safe house's location."

Apparently, the anti-Islam film was a cover, since it has been disclosed the producer of the film is a convicted Egyptian-born con artist.
