

NFL Replacement Refs as Bad as Obama, Says Paul Ryan

Contributed by Tom McGregor
Tue, Sep 25, 2012, 06:16 PM

GOP Vice Presidential Nominee U.S. Rep. Paul Ryan (R.-Wi.) has blasted NFL replacement referees and pointed out that they are similar to President Barack Obama's administration.

According to USA Today, "GOP vice presidential nominee Paul Ryan — a Green Bay Packers fan — says it's time for the NFL's replacement referees to take a hike."

At a campaign event in Cincinnati, the Wisconsin Congressman said, "give me a break. It's time to get the real refs. And do you know what, it reminds me of President Obama and the economy. If you can't get it right, it's time to get out."

As reported by USA Today, "Ryan had no trouble linking football to politics — even remarking that he believes the NFL replacement refs must work for Obama's budget office."

To read the entire article from USA Today, link here: Tmcgregordallas@yahoo.com