Great Britain's most notorious radical Islamist terrorist has been extradited to the U.S. Radical Muslim cleric Abu Hamza appeared at a court in New York to fight for his right to bring deadly hooks into his prison cell. The Daily Mail of London reports that, "the hate preacher, who lost his hands in an explosion, did not enter a plea during the brief hearing and was remanded in custody ahead of his next appearance on Tuesday." The former imam at the Finsbury Park mosque, who had his hooks removed for "security reasons," has pleaded in court for their return so "he can use his arms." According to the Mail, "also in New York, Abel Abdul Bary and Khaled al-Fawwaz pleaded not guilty while earlier in the day Babar Ahmad and Talha Ahsan pleaded not guilty in a court in Connecticut." The accused terrorists landed in the US less than 24 hours after High Court judges in London threw out his last-ditch appeal to remain in the United Kingdom.
