

Obama Campaign Website: Made in China

Contributed by Tom McGregor
Mon, Oct 8, 2012, 08:58 PM

Apparently, President Barack Obama has outsourced his Website staff to China, while at the same time hitting the campaign trail bashing the country. Chinese computer technicians can even obtain credit card information of Obama donors.

According to Breitbart.com, "the unusual Obama.com website redirects traffic directly to a donation page on the Obama campaign's official website, my.barackobama.com, which does not require donors to enter their credit card security code (known as CVV code), thereby increasing the likelihood of foreign or fraudulent donations." The Website is owned by Robert Roche, a U.S. citizen living in Shanghai, China. He is the chairman of a Chinese infomercial company with ties to state-owned banks that permit it to "gain revenue through credit card transactions with Chinese banks."

To read the entire article from Breitbart.com, link here: Tmcgregordallas@yahoo.com