

Biden Laughs about Iran Nukes and High Unemployment

Contributed by Tom McGregor
Fri, Oct 12, 2012, 08:28 PM

Vice President Joe Biden is just one-heart beat away from the U.S presidency, but that won't stop 'Smirking Joe' from laughing at unemployed American voters and considering the Middle East crisis as nothing but a joke. The Northern Colorado Gazette reports that, "Vice President Joe Biden has received criticism after he was laughing while the subject of a nuclear Iran was being discussed in this week's vice-presidential debate." Amidst the debate in Danville, Kentucky, which was watched by an estimated 43 million viewers Vice President Joe Biden interrupted GOP candidate Paul Ryan 82 times during the 90-minute debate. According to the Gazette, "during the debate Ryan maintained a calm demeanor and ignored Biden's attempt to interrupt him as he simply continued speaking. At times this appeared to frustrate Biden who attempted to talk over Ryan when he continued speaking." Biden was frequently seen laughing about very important issues such as over the deficit and Iran's nuclear ambitions.

To read the entire article from the Northern Colorado Gazette, link here: Tmcgregordallas@yahoo.com